V. Reasoned Statement after Art. 35(2) PCT

The present application deals with devices allowing the buzzing on a brass musical wind instrument, i.e. playing on the mouthpiece without having the instrument's tone generated.

The closest prior art is disclosed in International Search Report Document D1 (US-A-4245544), which discloses a construction into which the mouthpiece of the brass musical wind instrument can be fit, and which has a body intended to procure a playing feeling to the player without him actually playing on the trumpet.

Starting from this document, the present application seeks to solve the technical problem of avoiding wear of the mouthpiece due to changing between the real instrument and the practising item described.

In order to solve this problem, the applicant provides a mouthpiece with a ventilation opening, which can be closed or opened by actuating a blocking means.

This solution to the technical problem is claimed in independent device claim 1, see the characterizing part.

Since in the prior art as made available by the International Search Report there has been no indication nor even a vague hint towards incorporating a ventilation mechanism allowing the player to switch between playing and buzzing without detaching the mouthpiece, the claims appear to fulfill the requirements to novelty and inventive step of Art. 33 PCT.
